I am going to tell of a charming belle,
Such a nice young girl as sweet as muscatelle
She'd a fair fair skin and her father was in the city militia,
I called on her da-da one day
Something important I had to say
But his daughter said he was away
So I couldn't see her, da-da, da-da, &c.

CHORUS.—Da-da, da-da, da-da, da-da, &c.

I blushed to my nose, when I saw sweet rose
I oft had lacked the courage to propose
Not knowing what to say I invited her to play
A tune from some opera,
Then I put my arms around her waist
Her lovely lips I longed to taste
Said she, you'd better retire in haste
Or I shall call da-da, &c.

CHORUS.—Da-da, da-da, da-da, da-da, &c.

Says I my dear, your da-da's not here
But believe what I say my darling is sincere,
I consider you divine, say! will you be mine
Or I'll jump in the Delaware;
Then she answered with a voice so bland
Your haste, sir, I must reprimand,
You've got my heart, but for my hand
You must go and ask da-da, &c.

CHORUS.—Da-da, da-da, da-da, da-da, &c.

Next morning I went for her pa's consent
He gave me a look of great astonishment
Said he I never knew that the girl loved you
You may have her, said I huzza
We're married now and oh what joy
Nothing can our wedded life annoy
For we've lately got a little boy
That we're teaching to say da-da, &c.

CHORUS.—Da-da, da-da, da-da, da-da, &c.
